

Abstract

An antenna includes a first core made of magnetic material, a coil including a conductive wire wound around a predetermined region of the first core, and a second core made of magnetic material. The second core is 5 operable to move an inside of the coil. The antenna has a resonant frequency adjustable over a wide range.